STUDENT FLATS CHAOS

Queen's slap 40-mile distance limit on allocation of places in halls of residence

BY CONOR MCPARLAND

NO students living within 40 miles of Queen's will be offered places in the university's halls of residence. The announcement from Queen's came after it offered

£1,500 to any students agreeing to give up their halls of residence places amidst unprecedented demand for accommodation for the new term. On Wednesday, students who had applied for rooms in halls of residence received an email from the university saying it is "unable to meet the demand" for accommodation.

And the university has apologised for the "uncertainty" over places. See story, page 3.
