Robert Carson and Emily Semple try a novel form of transport during a day out on the Lagan

Last train from Belfast

End of an era as city centre station gets set to close to make way for new transport hub

BY CONOR MCPARLAND

HISTORY will be made at Great Victoria Street Station on Friday night when the last train pulls out ahead of the opening of the new transport super-hub.

Train enthusiasts and history buffs are expected to pack on to the 11.32 to Bangor when it pulls out of the station which has served the city of Belfast for 185 years.

"During this special day on Friday, we want to surprise and delight our passengers, recognise our staff, many of whom started their careers at the station, and engage the community, capturing all the nostalgia of the occasion," said a Translink spokesman. See story, page 2.
